Her Grace.

A Washington divine tells a story of a certain clergyman's family in which it was the custom that each of his children repeat a Bible verse at the beginning of every meal in place of the more general formula of grace before meat.

One day one of his little girls had been found out in some small sin, and had been sentenced to a much curtailed dinner, to be eaten at a table quite by herself, that her contaminating presence should be set apart from the others. When the family was seated around the dining room table the usual little ceremonial was performed, and when her brothers and sisters had each repeated a text her father called upon her, sitting solitary at a wee table at the other side of the room. At first she demurred on the ground that being barred from the family circle she saw no reason for joining the family devotions. Her father insisted; she remained silent a moment thinking, then spoke out clearly: "Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies."—Washington Star.

Speaker's Dinner Table.

The Speaker's dinner table used to form part of the furniture given him by the nation. When on a peacetime he retired into private life the table used to accompany him.

At Lord Sydney's, Up-Ottery, the Devonshire home of Speaker Addington's descendants, may be seen the table at which Lord Nelson sat as one of the guests. There is, or used to be, something on its surface to remind one that the great admiral, while sitting at this table, dipped his napkin in a finger bowl and with it drew on the polished wood a rough sketch of the Mediterranean, indicating with a cross the precise point at which he expected to come up with the French and Spanish fleets and to smash both of them. The point was Trafalgar Bay, and so it fell out.—Westminster Gazette.

Handling the Tomato Crop.

The most important part of the handling of a tomato crop is the picking, sorting and packing. If wisely and carefully done the results will be very satisfactory. In picking tomatoes for the market I first go through the patch searching closely for all the sound, smooth ones which are in the turning stage—that is, with a slight shade of redness in color, yet green and firm. I never pick any cracked or disfigured tomatoes to ship to the market, says a writer in American Agriculturist.

Those that are smooth and uniform in size are placed in crate baskets on their sides, with the blossom end up, so as to show to the best advantage. I do not crate anything but No. 1 in a No. 1 package and No. 2 quality in a No. 2 package. Anything inferior to No. 2 will not pay to crate and ship. I find by observing this rule I save the cost of many crates, also the transportation charges on them, as well as the labor of putting them up, and obtain better prices for what I do ship.

When picking for the market I pick only No. 1 fruit first and then pick the No. 2 fruit. It is seldom that I ship any No. 2 fruit. I find by not picking the cracked and disfigured tomatoes green, but letting them remain on the vines to ripen to the right stage for canning purposes more money can usually be realized from them than if packed to ship. There is always some one ready to purchase No. 2 fruit to use for winter use. In this way it can readily be disposed of at a good price. I never overlook the great importance of packing my fruit carefully and honestly and true to brand. Good fruits and vegetables properly handled are always in demand at fair prices.

WOMEN HELD AS ACCOMPLICES IN BURGLARIES.

Springfield Police Believe They Have the Authors of the Recent Mysterious House Robberies.

Springfield, Mass., Aug. 28.—William H. Green, alias John Hefferman, alias Jack McGee, alias J. Grant, pleaded guilty to two charges of burglary in the police court yesterday and was bound over to the September term of the Superior court.

Mary Connelly, alias Mrs. W. H. Green, who was arrested with him and who is believed by the police to have been his assistant in the recent mysterious house robberies in this city, pleaded not guilty, and will be given a hearing Friday.

When arrested Monday, the police found two suit cases full of plunder in their room on Vernon street. A further search has brought to light two trunks apparently packed for immediate flight, each filled with stolen property, while another trunk and a suit case had been checked at the union station. In all more than $1,000 worth of stolen goods have been recovered, together with checks on pawn shops in this city and Northampton, where several valuable pieces of jewelry had been disposed of.

Much of the plunder found in their possession has not been identified. Green has worked at various times in the past few years as an attendant at the state hospital for the insane in Northampton and the state hospital for epileptics in Monson and as clerk at the Henkle hotel in this city. About $200 worth of champagne and cigars were found in his room, while a suit case filled with champagne corks indicated that the couple had made merry during their residence here.

Mrs. Greene is a slender brunette, 25-year-old, dressed very pretty and about 23 years of age. She claims to have been married to Green in Montreal about five years ago. She denies that she participated in the robberies.

His Charge.

"It is always refreshing," said a Cleveland lawyer, "to hear of an attorney who will not undertake a shady case. I know of at least one such, a lawyer in Toledo."

"At one time a chap in business in that town known to be practicing questionable methods sought to retain the Toledo lawyer, and was something over his crooked conduct as well as he knew how, when the attorney astonished him by exclaiming:

"I think you have acted like an infernal scoundrel, sir!"

"Is there any charge for that opinion?" asked the man, as he arose to go.

"Yes, sir; $5."—Harper's Weekly.

INSECT GESTURES.

How An Ant Warns Its Fellow of Any Danger.

Insects express emotions by bodily gestures. And mimetic language, though far more limited, is not less intelligible than vocal speech. Indeed, a glance of the eye, a movement of the hand, a shrug of the shoulder, a stamp of the foot, a toss of the head, may betray in man the true thought or feeling, even when spoken language is used to conceal it. We may find, perhaps, that this medium serves insects no less effectively for communication, within that limited range of ideas, shall we say?—to which their faculties are confined.

Let us stand before this oak tree and watch a double stream of mound-making ants (Formica exsectoides) thronging up and passing down the well-marked trail that leads to a herd of aphides upon some branches that overhang a stone fence. The motion of a finger near the trunk attracts the attention of a sentinel—one of a number that seem to be guarding the flanks of the column. It halts, thrusts out its antennae, and shows signs of excitement. As an experiment, the finger is approached within an inch or more of the ant. Its antennae wave rapidly. Its head and body jerk with eager intensity. It stretches forth its head and reaches out its forelegs, with jaws eagerly agape and antennae quivering. The whole attitude and every bodily detail clearly express to the observer the ideas of vigilance; of suspicion; of a challenge; of a purpose to repel. As plainly as if it had spoken, the sentinel has said: "I suspect you. I test you. I bid you begone!" We overlookers understand this. Is it supposable that ants themselves do not understand?—Dr. H. C. McCook in Harper's for September.

Maple Products Factory at Rutland.

Rutland, Aug. 28.—The Rutland Improvement league is thinking seriously of establishing a plant here for the manufacture of high grade maple products. A proposition was then made by C. B. Welch, of Burlington, and a committee appointed to investigate the matter has reported favorably. It is very probable that a stock company will be formed. It is proposed to have a building 60 by 40 feet and to employ about fifteen men at the outset.

CELERY PRACTICE.

No Attempt Should Be Made to Store Early Varieties.

The White Plume is the earliest and most easily grown celery for the home garden. With rich soil, ample moisture and good cultivation the plants may be grown to reach a height (or length) of eighteen inches or more, with a diameter of four inches, making a close bunch of broad, thick stalks.

During the season of growth the stalks and leaves are a dark green, but late in the fall the young growth in the center of the plant becomes snowy white both in stalk and leaf, and where properly blanched the entire stalk is quickly blanched to a pure paper whiteness. The blanched stalks are crisp and brittle and free from stringiness.

BLANCHING CELERY.
[Early celery may be blanched easily by boards. Stand them on edge close to the stalks and hold in position by a cleat or wood.]

when properly grown, but have a rather strong walnut flavor early in the season.

I have tried many of the so called easy ways to blanch the crop, but have settled down to the old way of banking up the stalks with soil, as it gives the most satisfactory results, and, to my thinking, the best flavor, says a writer in Garden Magazine.

No attempt should be made to store the early varieties of celery, such as White Plume and Golden Self Blanching. Use these directly from the row where they are grown.

Where a good supply of litter can be had it is an excellent plan to winter all the celery in the rows where it is grown, making broad banks of earth at the sides of the rows and covering these deeply with straw or leaves from the woods when the ground freezes and later covering the litter with corn fodder or evergreen branches. If this is not practicable, select a well drained plot and dig out a trench one foot deep and one foot wide.

FRAMES FOR STORING CELERY.
[The crop may be stored in frames like these if protected from frost with earth or litter.]

Dig the plants carefully with the roots attached and set them closely together in the trench, packing fine soil about the roots. Then bank up the earth taken from the trench until the tips of the leaves are exposed, rounding the banks so as to shed the rains. Cover trench with wide boards nailed together to form a V shaped roof. This in turn is covered with straw or litter.

Shipping Peas.

Peas, especially winter varieties, used to be quite largely shipped in barrels like apples. One sometimes sees them in market today in barrels. Fine peas like Bartlett are shipped in boxes or in five-eighths bushel dunnage baskets. Unfortunately of late years, owing to the ravages of blight, peas growing have greatly decreased and many of the finest varieties have disappeared from the market. Kieifers are able to take care of themselves in almost every package, but bring best returns when neatly put up in box form.—Maryland Experiment Station.

The Woodchuck.

We make a crop around our meadows and other fields about this time of the year and give the woodchucks a dose of bisulphide of carbon. Take a hoe with you and a lot of old rags. Wet a rag with a tablespoonful of the poison, tuck it down the hole, fill the hole with dirt and say goodbye to Mr. Woodchuck. You won't see him again.—Farm Journal.

Green Manuring.

Green manuring cannot be recommended on good soils except at long intervals, when there is reason to believe that there is need either of more humus or more nitrogen. Where red clover or alfalfa can be used in rotation the need of a special green manure crop is seldom felt.—C. V. Piper.

Army Rifles.

The rifle was introduced into the British service about the beginning of the last century. It was of such primitive make that marksmen were served out with each rifle to ram the bullets home.
